 Notes:

Transportation

- By 2015 actions at local and regional government should promote multiple transportation choices to link cities, employment centers and residential areas.
- The City of Hamilton recognizes the need for multiple forms of transportation to improve quality of life.

 Notes:

Land Use

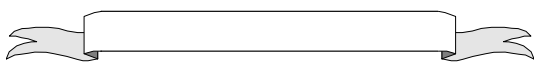

- Land Use refers to the way which cities and people use the land and resources.
- Efficient use of land is key to ensuring quality of life in our communities

Neighborhoods and Housing

- The City seeks to create viable neighborhoods to enhance health, stability and diversity in the community.
- The City should enhance Hamilton's role as the county's most diverse housing market by offering housing of different types.
- In 2020, new and redeveloped neighborhoods should include walkable, compatible retail, business, education, and civic uses.
- In addition, a broad range of housing types and price levels should be provided.

Notes:

Urban Design

- The Comprehensive Plan serves as a guide for promoting high quality and livable urban areas
- Urban design should be integrated into transportation, parks, housing, education, economic development and environment to promote/enhance the city.

Notes:

Environment And Parks

- Every building, public utility and road constructed has an impact on people and the environment
- The city should provide and maintain parks and recreational areas to meet citizen needs.

Riverfront/Downtown

- Strong and healthy downtowns are the centerpieces of any region
- Downtowns have recreation, arts, cultural centers, retail and residential uses making them a general focus for economic development
